NewPanam, a new start

Initially part of the NewParis typeface, NewPanam Skyline is taking a little independence in 2019. Instead of complementing a family, it's taking its unique style outside his last collection to make its own. NewPanam is a sans-serif font that still shares the same vertical proportions than NewParis and still can be combined with it harmoniously even within the same line. Think of NewPanam Skyline as a “non-contrast” sibling. Some of the signature letterforms of the serif are echoed in a stylized form, like the ‘g’ with the audaciously swinging tail, or the ‘y’ with the straight descender. Other letters like the ‘a’ exhibit a different shape that better matches the genre of the geometric sans-serif with its circular forms. The razor-sharp terminals of ‘j’ and ‘t’ add to its personality and charm. With the unmodulated strokes, the sans can step in for captions and other small text where the Didot’s hairlines are too delicate.
